2 Research Interests

I am a fourth-year PhD candidate in UIUC, majoring in operations research, and currently doing research in mechanism design. In general, my research interests span a wide scope related to incentive-aware design and optimization for emerging applications in digital economy, including blockchain systems, e-commerce, ridesharing platforms and so on. I am also interested in data-driven mechanism design based on statistical/online learning, and topics in cryptography and distributed systems with applications in blockchain.

On a very high level, my (starry-eyed) dream for research lies in the following fields, which are also the topics I am most actively working on:

- AI for mechanism design [#A4M]: e.g., using data-driven methods to improve the performance of economic platforms.
- Mechanism design for AI [#M4A]: e.g., using economic incentives to reinforce the efficiency and security of AI systems.
- Sustainability in AI & Economy [#SUS]: e.g. using interdisciplinary methodologies to foster long-term social welfare and environmental friendliness for new-era AI and economic platforms.

Additionally, I was interested in geometry-based computer graphics and vision at my undergraduate times. Although I no longer focus on that research field, I am still happy to discuss about related topics, especially the recently fruitful field of embodied AI [#EAI].
